

Collection Overview & Acquisition Opportunities

The Cremean Archives

Introduction

The Cremean Archives is a fine art preservation, cataloging, and virtual museum project dedicated to the estates of Robert "Bob" Cremean and Robert De Lavergne.

Together, the artists produced more than 3,500 installation works, 200 ceramic pieces, 100 paintings, 1,500 pages of original sketchbooks and drawings, and over 1,000 published pages documenting their work.

Over a career spanning nearly seventy years, Bob Cremean established an international reputation through teaching and exhibition, with work shown at the Venice Biennale, Whitney Biennial, and the Smithsonian Institution. His work is represented in permanent collections including the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Los Angeles County Museum of Art, Crocker Art Museum, and the National Collection of Fine Arts in Washington, D.C.

The Cremean Archives preserves this legacy through comprehensive photography, cataloging, provenance research, and digital documentation while facilitating the long-term placement of remaining works in museums, galleries, and public collections.

Current Collection

While the digital archive documents the artists' complete body of work, only a limited number of original works remain in the estate.

These pieces represent the final privately held examples from an important American artistic career. Our objective is to ensure their long-term preservation through acquisition, donation, or institutional stewardship.

Complete documentation, provenance, dimensions, and high-resolution imagery are available through The Digital Estate, with additional records currently being finalized.

Partnership Opportunities

The Cremean Archives welcomes conversations with museums, universities, galleries, foundations, and cultural institutions interested in:

- Acquisition of individual works or significant portions of the collection.
- Collection consultation and institutional placement.
- Exhibition, preservation, research, and long-term stewardship partnerships.

A complete inventory, provenance documentation, condition reports, and high-resolution photography are available upon request.

Whether your institution is actively seeking acquisitions or simply wishes to learn more about the collection, we welcome the opportunity to begin a conversation.
